

Week 35: Inspirations

Day One

Surrender is accepting that God is all.

Day Two

Being surrendered to God requires living in the moment, open to what life brings. This does not mean that we float along in our boat, tossed here and there with every wave of change, without steering toward a destination. Our course is charted to God-realization; our rudder is selfless service.

Day Three

Good works can bring us to the door of God-realization, but only surrender and grace take us through.

Day Four

Our ability to surrender to God is directly related to mental and emotional maturity, a strong foundation of faith, and steady spiritual practice. Spiritual surrender is not a passive act. It is an active giving over of self-protection and self-will, a vote of confidence in the Infinite, a decision to trust. It is releasing the erroneous idea of a separate self.

Day Five

Surrender can happen in a moment, but living a surrendered life requires practice and daily commitment.

Day Six

When we are surrendered to God a change in consciousness is unavoidable. It occurs in our life like the approaching dawn. There is a long time in the dark, then slowly, barely perceptible changes begin to occur until finally the entire landscape of our life is illumined.

Day Seven

Surrender of the sense of separation does not mean extinction of the individual. It means that the activity of the Divine can now flow freely through that individual without the conflict of wills.
