

Journal: Lesson 44

How is the connection between contemplation and action real to me? In what ways does one inform the other?

Is my spiritual way of life revolutionary? What does that mean to me? What is different about it than the way I used to approach life?

When I examine my desire for a spiritually conscious life, how willing am I to do what is needed?

When I read the following sentence from this week's lesson, is there one or more areas where I could bring greater focus or willingness to do what is needed? "Success, even with spiritual awareness and principles, requires dedicated engagement in spiritual practice, perseverance, flexibility, and ultimately, surrendered devotion."

What (or who) do I strive to become? What is my spiritual vision of the person I desire to be?

Write about a challenge in your life that can be a doorway to a new beginning.
